Discussion questions

1. Education

The book treats education as the foundation everything else stands on. Beyond formal schooling, what has been your most valuable education? Who taught it to you?

2. Career

Have you ever faced a choice between a career opportunity and your family or values? What did you decide, and what did it cost?

3. Investing

The book asks readers to think in decades, not months. What's one financial decision you made (or wish you'd made) with a 20-year horizon?

4. Family

Which chapter's message about family structure and responsibility hit closest to home for you? Why?

5. Relationships

Who are the 3–5 people whose counsel actually shapes your big decisions? Are they the right voices?

6. Leadership

Drawing on the author's Army experience: what's the difference between authority and leadership in your own life — at work, at home?

7. Legacy

“Success isn't just money and status.” What are you building that will outlast you? What would your grandchildren say you stood for?

8. Intentionality

The book's core argument is that life is the sum of a handful of big decisions, most made without much thought. Which upcoming decision in your life deserves more deliberate thought?

9. Discipline vs. motivation

The book favors consistency over inspiration. Where in your life have you relied on motivation when discipline was what you needed?

10. Your step

Of the seven pillars, which one is strongest in your life right now — and which one needs the most work this year?
